Job Title: Lecturer / Senior Lecturer in Biological Anthropology
Job ID: 11356
Location: Auckland City Campus
Full/Part Time: Full-Time
Regular/Temporary: Permanent

Position Overview

The Department of Anthropology at The University of Auckland, is seeking a Lecturer/Senior Lecturer in Biological Anthropology. The appointment will ideally begin in February 2010, although we would accept a July 2010 start. Candidates must have a PhD in hand, or have their defence scheduled, at the time of application.

We are seeking a colleague who complements our existing strengths, with a strong background in biological anthropology. Research specialisation is open. Individuals with expertise in lab-based research skills (e.g. genetics, stable isotopes, etc), and with a strong interest in evolutionary theory, as applied to health, nutrition, reproduction, or migration in either contemporary or past human populations are particularly encouraged to apply.

The successful applicant will be expected to contribute to undergraduate and graduate courses and labs in biological anthropology, undertake graduate supervision, carry out an active research program leading to peer-reviewed publications, and take on administrative responsibilities commensurate with their academic level.

The department has a strong program in multi-disciplinary anthropology with undergraduate degrees in both Anthropology (BA) and Anthropological Science (BSc) and graduate degrees in Anthropology.

There are opportunities for co-teaching and research cooperation within and between the sub-disciplines. The Department has links with the School of Biological Sciences and the Faculty of Medical and Health Sciences and maintains laboratories and technicians. We are committed to the engagement of students in ongoing research.
